Confidence on a ninth straight weekly gain

- Confidence strengthened further last week, with all the sub-indices gaining compared to the previous reading. The nine-week run is the most extended run of consecutive gains since the index changed to a weekly format in 2008.
- Confidence in economic conditions gained substantially, with 'current economic conditions' up 15.7% and 'future economic conditions' up 7.5%.
- 'Current finances' gained 0.6%, while 'future finances' gained 0.2% to sit just 2.1% below the long-run average.
- 'Time to buy a major household item' rose 10.9%, its fourth straight gain.
- The four-week moving average for 'inflation expectations' was stable at 3.3%.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

Last weekend (30-31 May)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
98.3	6%	93.4	112.9	3.3%

This weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,514 interviews conducted online and over the telephone on the weekend. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

On the back of strong gains in the 'economic conditions' subindices, confidence strengthened further last week. Nine weekly gains in a row is unprecedented. To be fair, though, so was the depth of the starting point. More good news about control of the pandemic and the consequent relaxation of restrictions is key to the lift in sentiment. Expectations of residential housing stimulus and lower petrol prices may also be playing a role. Though lower petrol prices are also contributing to the record low in inflation expectations.

Confidence up 6%
