Confidence at an eight-month high

- A sharp improvement in 'time to buy a major household item' has pushed consumer confidence above the neutral level for the first time since early March. On a weekly basis, consumer confidence rose 3.2%.
- 'Current financial conditions' reversed its previous week's fall and rose by 6.1%. 'Future financial conditions' declined by 1.2%.
- 'Current economic conditions' rose by 1.8%, its fifth consecutive weekly gain. The 'future financial conditions' rose by 0.2%.
- 'Time to buy a major household item' jumped by 10% to its highest level since early March. The four-week moving average of 'Inflation expectations' remained stable at 3.4%.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

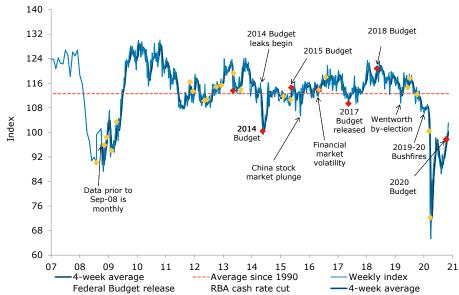

Last weekend (7-8 Nov)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
103.1	3.2%	100.2	112.6	3.4%

This weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,529 interviews conducted online and over the telephone on the weekend. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

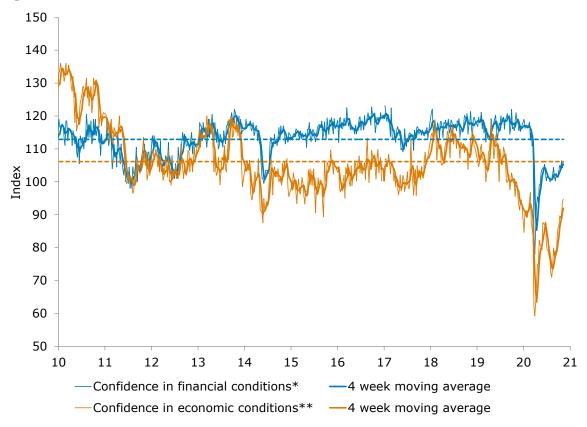

Consumer confidence is now above the neutral level for the first time since the pandemic began, posting its tenth gain in a row to hit an eight-month high. Notably, there is sharp improvement in 'time to buy a major household item', which could signal a buoyant Christmas shopping period. Lower interest rates and the RBA's commitment to support employment could have been triggers for the gain. Our concern over weakness in last week's 'current financial conditions' has relaxed somewhat as the fall turned around this week.

Confidence up 3.2%
