Confidence consolidates

- Consumer confidence rose a modest 0.8% last week, consolidating last week’s bigger gain. The gains came on the back of an improved assessment of ‘financial conditions’, while ‘economic conditions’ pulled back following its strong surge the week prior. Confidence is close to its long-run average.
- ‘Current financial conditions’ gained 3.9%, while ‘future financial conditions’ improved by 3.1%.
- ‘Current economic conditions’ weakened 2.6% and ‘future economic conditions’ declined 2.4%.
- ‘Time to buy a major household item’ increased 1.9%. The four-week moving average for inflation expectations was steady at 3.7%.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

Last weekend (30-31 Jan)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
112.1	0.8%	110.2	112.6	3.7%

This weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,541 interviews conducted online and over the telephone on the weekend. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

The second week of gains in consumer confidence reflects the improved assessment of personal financial conditions, consistent with the improving labour market. The pullback in ‘economic conditions’ is somewhat of a rebalancing following its sharp surge the previous week. The headline confidence level is close to its long-term average, for the first time since late 2019. This suggests momentum in the economy remains positive. Weekly inflation expectations rose 0.1ppt to 3.8% and has now effectively reversed all of fall in expectations seen during the early months of the pandemic. News of the lockdown of Perth and southwest Western Australia came too late to impact the survey.

Consumer confidence rose 0.8%
