Warren Hogan appointed global Chief Economist

ANZ today announced the appointment of Warren Hogan as global Chief Economist, responsible for co-ordinating economics teams in Asia, New Zealand and Australia.

Mr Hogan joined ANZ in 2005 and has been Chief Economist for Australia since February 2010. He will report to Managing Director Global Markets, Steve Bellotti.

In the role, Warren will lead ANZ's Economics and Global Markets Research team which provides economic analysis on the global economy, financial markets and the economies of Australia's major trading partners. The appointment further aligns the team's research capabilities with ANZ's super regional strategy.

The Heads of Economics in Asia, New Zealand and Australia will report to Warren and also continue to be responsible to regional management for the provision of economic research.

Paul Gruenwald, Chief Economist, Asia, will report to Warren and Richard Huston, Head of Global Markets, Asia Pacific Europe & America. Cameron Bagrie, Chief Economist, New Zealand, will report to Warren and David Green, Head of Institutional, New Zealand. Ivan Colhoun, Head of Australian Economics, will continue to report to Warren.

Previously, Mr Hogan was Head of Australian Economics and Interest Rate Research at ANZ, Chief Economist and Head of Interest Rate Product Research at Credit Suisse First Boston and has worked in senior economic positions with Westpac Banking Corporation and NSW Treasury Corporation.
